FAA-99-5926-296

To whom it may concern;

Tens of thousands of persons are able to view the rajesty of the Grand Canyon and leave no lasting impact by viewing the spectacle from the air. If these visitors drove into the park or hiked it's trails, the impact would be significant. The focus should be to protect the natural environment, not the perception of the visitors. Don't force thousands of additional physical visits to this park by severely restricting the aerial viewing opportunities.

A concerned environmentalist,

Joel Mapes
